Stage 22: "sub horreo" – under the barn

Modestus and Strythio, having left from the prison, fled to the barn. They crawled through the narrow entrance, and were staying hidden under the barn. The centurion Valerius, who he had seen the cell doors opened and the deserted prison, was very angry. He ordered the soldiers to capture Modestus and Strythio. However the soldiers, although they were searching through the whole military camp, were not able to find them. They were staying hidden for two days. On the third day, Modestus was so miserable that he was not able to carry on this thing for a longer time.

Modestus: How unlucky I am! I would prefer to be in that prison rather than lie hidden under this barn. What sort of life is this? It is necessary for me to eat the grain which the mice have left. Here is Strythio, my companion in exile, but he has not helped me. For Strythio is a man of great silence and few jokes. Alas! I am bored of this life.

Strythio: My Modestus, it is difficult for us to remain here for a longer time. Now, however, it is getting dark. Do you want me, having left the barn, to search for food? Food always brings comfort to miserable men.

Modestus: It is the best plan. We must eat. Strythio, I put you in charge of this thing. First go to the cook. Order him to cook a splendid meal and to bring it here. Then search for Aulus and Publius, our friends. Invite them to dinner. Order Aulus to bring an amphora of wine, Publius a lamp and dice. Then run to the town. Find Nigrita! She is the best dancing-girl; dancing girls also bring comfort to me.

Strythio: What did you say? You want me to lead a dancing girl into the military camp?

Modestus: Go away, idiot!

Strythio, to carry out the orders of Modestus, reluctantly left. He persuaded the cook to prepare a splendid meal. He persuaded Aulus and Publius to bring wine and a lamp and dice. He begged Nigrita to come to the barn, but was not able to persuade her.
